John Kelly serves as president, Xerox Global Services North America. He was named to this position in April 2007. Kelly oversees global services development and delivery, manages North American sales operations, and implements go-to-market initiatives and technologies for the company's document management and business process services offerings. He is also a vice president of the corporation, appointed in February 2006.

Prior to joining Xerox, Kelly founded and served as president and chief executive officer of Niteo Partners Inc., a strategic technology-consulting firm that is a wholly owned subsidiary of NEC Solutions America. The company designs and develops advanced technology solutions for Fortune 500 clients requiring the integration of online and legacy information systems.

Kelly's extensive consulting experience dates back more than 20 years. From 1985 to 1997, he held key leadership positions in Cap Gemini's Americas and European consulting business, working with Global 100 clients in the energy, telecommunications, transportation, aerospace and financial services industries. He first joined the company as a senior consultant and quickly rose to senior management. He served as co-managing director of Gemini Consulting UK in London from 1990 until 1992, when he became senior vice president of European Operations, and then served as senior vice president of Global Innovation. In 1995, he assumed the role of managing director for the Americas Region, where he significantly expanded the company's positions in Brazil and Canada, forming two new practices in high technology and healthcare.

Kelly earned his bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from Manhattan College in New York City and holds a master of engineering and operations research degree from the University of Texas at Austin.
